

ExxonSecrets

ExxonSecrets is a Greenpeace research project that exposes the campaign Exxon has run for more than a decade to deny the urgency of the scientific consensus on global warming and delay action to fix the problem.

For more information, see the ExxonSecrets FAQ.

This database compiles Exxon Foundation and corporate funding to a series of institutions that have worked to undermine solutions to global warming and climate change. It details the working relationships of individuals associated with these organizations and their global warming quotes and deeds.

Tue, 20 Jul 2010 04:36:45 +0000
ExxonMobil gave approximately $1.3 million to climate denial organizations last year. This has been reported by The Times (London) after being provided information by the Greenpeace Research Department. (The Times is unfortunately a subscription-only paper online, but a version of the story can be found syndicated at The Australian). Greenpeace tabulated this figure - as we have done every year - f...

Today, Guardian writer Ed Pilkington took a fresh swat at Governor Sarah Palin's use and defense of Exxon-funded junk science on polar bears in the State of Alaska's attempts to to kill the listing of the polar bear under the Endangered Species Act. We have covered the evolution of this story on ExxonSecrets for over a year here and here with links to articles and documents of interest. Much has b...

The UK TV watchdog, Ofcom, is the watchdog for the UK broadcasting industry, keeping an eye on how broadcasters carry out their duty to the public to be both fair and accurate and not cause harm. Ofcom ruled today on a complaint against the polemic documentary about global warming, The Great Global Warming Swindle. It upheld complaints by the former UK Chief Scientist, Sir David King, the IPCC...
